Community

For those who participate in school based programs or are interested in beginning this relationship in your community, the CDC has released Considerations for K-12 Schools: Readiness and Planning Tool. As Dr. Scott Wolpin reminded us this week:

"Two very important messages schools need to hear from partnering health centers is that we are dedicated to providing safe, quality care (following the OSHA, OSAP and CDC's guidance specifically related to COVID 19) and that we understand that class time is more important than ever since many schools may now need to divide classes into smaller cohorts (attending school on alternate days from each other.)

I am anxious that it may be more difficult for schools to continue to support our dental outreach efforts. I think meeting with school administrators early and sharing our understanding of their challenges will go far in sustaining/expanding the great oral health projects happening in our nation's schools."
